“ So glad to know from her that she was at peace with God her Savior and ready to go home. She had fought a hard fight.Loved her dearly.

“ When I was eight years old I was in an accident that almost killed me. For weeks my mother never left the hospital and rarely left my bedside.

“ That's so true. She and I had a rocky relationship, probably worse than most siblings. I can only imagine coming into our family, she felt like an outsider. Momma always taught us steps belong on your porch, not as a title. She may have been my 1/2 sister, & Cheryl & Althies step sister , but she was our sister. Period. End of story. She called momma mom. And momma loved her like she gave birth to her. Long story short, 3-4 months ago we sat down and talked everything out. She was not the same sister I grew up knowing. She found Jesus and somewhere in all that she found her love for me. I loved her so much. I feel like we got robbed of time because it took us so long to truly find each other. I love you girl. You say hello to Daddy, Mickey Jean, Ray Michael, Scott, & my son Colton up there. I will love you 4ever and a day, as you used to always say. Until we meet again. My oldest sister. I love you
